Highlights

- Triodos Sterling Bond Impact Fund generated a return (after costs) of -0.80%, while the benchmark yielded -0.65%.
- Markets retraced further on their rate cut expectations based on sticky inflation. The BoE is expected to keep its policy stance restrictive for some time to ensure that underlying inflationary pressures are contained. Furthermore, there are signs that the UK economy may have returned to growth in the first quarter of this year. This resulted in higher interest rates over the month. Gilts underperformed government-related and corporate bonds on improved risk sentiment.
- The fund had a negative performance and slightly underperformed the reference index over the month. The underperformance mostly came from a negative selection effect. The light overweight duration position of the fund was also slightly negative in an environment of rising bond yields. Allocation effect was positive, which was mainly related to an underweight position in Gilts.
